Task 2. Reading : A School Project That Changed Everything

Last year, a group of students at Green Hill School started a project. They wanted to make their school a better place and help the environment at the same time. At first, their teacher, Mrs Brown, wasn't sure if the idea would work, but she agreed to support them.

The students decided to reduce waste in their school. They placed recycling bins in every classroom and made posters to explain how to use them. They also gave short presentations to younger students about why recycling is important.

After a few months, the school became much cleaner. Students started to throw away less rubbish and recycle more. Even teachers joined the project and began using less paper.

One of the most interesting parts of the project was a “No Plastic Day.” On that day, students tried not to use any plastic at all. It was difficult, but it helped everyone understand how much plastic they usually use.

In the end, the project was a big success. The students learned that even small actions can make a big difference. Now, they are planning to start a garden near the school building.
